

Civil Justice Scholarship Award

Honoring scholars whose work supports the American civil justice system and/or trial by jury in American courts

Overview

The Pound Institute will make its Civil Justice Scholarship Award, annually as possible, to recognize current scholarly legal research and writing focused on topics in civil justice, including access to and the benefits of the U.S. civil justice system, as well as the right to trial by jury in civil cases.

Criteria

1. Nominated scholars must be full-time law professors at ABA-accredited law schools. If a written work has multiple authors, at least one of the authors must be a full-time professor as stipulated above.
2. A written work nominated for the award must be a single substantial book published by a university or legal press, or a single substantial published article in the law review of an ABA-accredited law school. The written work must have been published within three years prior to the submission date. Each year in which there are sufficient nominations of high quality, the Institute will select as recipient(s) one article and one book, or two articles.
3. The written work must provide legal research, public policy analysis, or advocacy that shows the benefits of the American civil justice system and/or trial by jury in American courts.
4. Self-nominations are acceptable; law school deans may make one (1) nomination for each category (book and article) for a scholar(s) from their school.
5. The award may be made jointly to more than one author of a single publication.
 - a. In this circumstance, the awarded honorarium will be divided equally among multiple authors.
 - b. In this circumstance, all recognized authors will be brought to the convention for the award presentation.
6. Works that were funded by the AAJ-Habush Endowment are ineligible.
7. Works authored by relatives of the Pound Institute or the AAJ-Habush Endowment board members are ineligible.

Award

The award will consist of a $7,000 cash stipend for a book and a $3,000 cash stipend for an article (totals to be shared if a work has multiple authors), plus round-trip coach travel and hotel accommodations for each recipient and one guest to receive the award at the Pound Fellows reception on Sunday, February 9, 2020 in New Orleans, Louisiana.
